/pol/ - Politically Incorrect

supply chain issues

Searching for posts that contain ‘supply chain issues’. 312 results found.

Anonymous ID:K/dAd/M3 Thu 30 Jul 2020 06:45:56 No.270340501
View Report
>>270335854
>Because I sure dont.
Maybe. I have record sales too as an essential manufacturer. However, I'm having vendors flake on me and falling apart. I have never in my life jumped around from vendor to vendor like I'm doing right now.
Record sales doesn't mean there isn't supply chain issues and let me tell you, there are some major supply chain issues which is putting me on edge. Because one fuckup from a vendor is taking my record sales to record losses.

View Same Google iqdb SauceNAO Trace 1580231732052.jpg, 190KiB, 611x867

Anonymous ID:zIYdO9Bv Tue 28 Jul 2020 09:58:23 No.270037236
View Report
>>270036032
as long as the senate prevents them from getting bailed out federally as much as i do not like the welfare bill being presented by them, i will say this: if republicans did not control the senate, the democrat bill, with all its horror, would have been shoveled through. imagine payouts to illegals, raises to not work, bailouts for state governments, and every other terrible thing you can think of that doesn't make the senate welfare good though: it's still very much based on flawed thinking and concedes too much ground, but slowing the enemy is better than letting them go full steam ahead >>270036467
i find it incredibly funny because there's actually a lot of secondary market under-the-table trading going because some people can't help but pointlessly consume. some of my family members are physically just buying stuff from other people offhand - and they're still having troubles because supply chain issues it's like all our economists forgot that money isn't what matters, it's a proxy value for exchanging goods and services. if you take away the goods and services but hand out lots of money, you forgot what economics is personally i wish the liquidity crisis would just happen and we could all unshackle ourselves from the banks but apparently poverty scares people

Anonymous ID:jmwuLTGm Mon 27 Jul 2020 09:44:18 No.269879766
View Report
>>269878620
You give Portland (the entire city is not one big riot) as your example but you said:

>Depends, the world at large will be fucking chaos and major cities will most likely be warzone-like

The societal problems America has are unique to America and its society, Americas problems with BLM are not Europes problem.

Supply chain problems are another issues but yes I agree supplt chain issues will definitely worsen the situation in America.

Meat is a problem because of outbreaks in meat factories but other supplies like fruit and veg, tinned goods, medicine, consumerist items (TV's, consoles etc) are all fine. If you have an example that says I'm wrong, give me an example of this problem outside of America.

Europe is relatively stable and so is England, Australia, Canada and so on and so forth. Riots aren't breaking out here.

Anonymous ID:Me3us+ZM Thu 23 Jul 2020 14:40:57 No.269325869
View Report
>>269322985
Lest you think that this is not all connected...here are three videos...they are trying to tell us--we only have to listen. I knew right off that Polly's video was real. Think about it--Kroger, Sam's / Walmart--all have their own fucking beef butchers in the back. If my local butcher has zero issues getting COW, they why...all explained in these videos. Polly's will explode your brain on the CONNECTIONS from the Floyd shit to Target agreeing to be looted! To the fake fucking meat agenda.

If we don't speak up and step OUT, they will win--make sure you tell whatever manager you speak to that you are fully aware of the fake meat agenda (as well as the coin shit) and let them know you have alerted your local butcher to make sure he's got a good supply chain to take up the slack for the Chink owned bullshitters trying to create a fake meat shortage. My local backed the fuck off that fake meat very quickly. About as quickly as they added an organic section when news of a HUGE grocery store being built that always has massive amounts of organic non GMO food.

Amazing Polly Mad Lab (connecting protests, Target, Tyson, fake meat etc).

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=p_OD5p3bCIQ

Joshua Phillips (Beyond Meat)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CcS-LhTJ76Y
China in Focus (Tyson again)
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OWdin109fY0

Anonymous ID:jbszge59 Sun 19 Jul 2020 15:33:25 No.268702692
View Report
>>268702195
Norway lmao, of course they will try it out.
>During the first three quarters of 2019, there were 3,540 registrations of the e-tron in the United States, 3,824 in Norway, 2,997 in Germany, and 706 in the Netherlands
>Audi paused production of the e-tron in February 2020 due to supply chain problems including issues with adequate supply of batteries for the e-tron.
lmao, already?

Anonymous ID:+Tg30K4L Sat 18 Jul 2020 17:19:19 No.268566508
View Report
>>268566364
>The supply chain issues
No, it's just companies being fucking tone deaf like they usually are.

Anonymous ID:TLU9U2cO Sat 18 Jul 2020 17:18:01 No.268566364
View Report
Quoted By: >>268566508
The supply chain issues are getting worse. Chipotle will probably be next

Anonymous ID:aJAVlR4e Sat 18 Jul 2020 01:25:19 No.268466429
View Report
>>268464707
We're compartmentalising the disease without losing supply in these states. And we're also stimulating job supplies in areas which have largely service economies right now.
Australia had problems with contaminated cargos and carriers working on ships. Plus there were issues with carriers on flights again. There would be no reason for these things if you have a sustainable localised economy to a degree.
Maybe it might be tricky when you try to resource primary resources like iron, etc, but clearly having only those resources shipped is better than having every other chain link of production shipped. It's the only necessary shipping requirement. The rest can be produced and serviced locally to a degree.

Maybe we may need more centralised coordination within these compartments, but the centralisation globally is definitely fucking with us right now. We're on a titanic because those compartments are not contained and so water is flooding everywhere.
If you compartmentalise things, there's a chance the "disease free" areas could retain that status and therefore react to the disease riddled states without losing supplies.

Anonymous ID:hSqVFeua Thu 16 Jul 2020 09:31:04 No.268205841
View Report
>>268178679
taking the long view, it obvious that CHINA and CHINESE alone possess the requisite ambition to dream big dreams and accomplish great things. as in gaddafi's prescient words: america has become decadent. in a sock puppet globalist world, democracy cannot survive. furthermore, the bloated hegemon stopped innovating. if you step back, china's shrewd behavior and bold calculations would not have been possible if not for 9/11 and what followed. now imagine this, the world, well 80%, forgives china. why and how might this happen? well for one, they own the rare earths industry;not just the mining but the entire supply chain. so direct conflict with US is off the table. they develop and export thorium MSR reactors to the world. a wave of civilizing, industrializing, fuel and water indepence washes over the developing world. ride china rides into an energy dense future. and they've managed to do it all without invoking MADD. you must appreciate what they've accomplished. with regards to cultural issues, this may be a pivot towards some reform on this front. however, im far less interested in their backwards culture as it stands today than where they will end up if they choose to embrace the singularity. which if your honest, the west will never attain or approach this ideal.

View Same Google iqdb SauceNAO Trace 1589598205446.png, 328KiB, 1935x1822

Anonymous ID:rRVGdsfn Sun 12 Jul 2020 17:44:21 No.267652881
View Report
>The pandemic also exposed vulnerabilities in the U.S. food supply chains. For example, COVID-19 outbreaks severely affected meat processing plants around the country, causing shortages.
>"We need a more diversified supply chain system in which you have many more actors" to avoid these types of issues, Miguel Gómez, an associate professor at Cornell's School of Applied Economics >professor at Cornell's School of Applied Economics
What an intelligent young man, another brilliant mind coming out of studying economics

>>267652378

View Same Google iqdb SauceNAO Trace E538AB20-0D1C-4BE9-AE5E-29E62A02 (...).jpg, 39KiB, 600x333

Anonymous ID:DkkzB2Bq Tue 07 Jul 2020 15:38:00 No.266853833
View Report
>>266834598
Continuing to rotate and add, issues will get worse going to Nov. Not just inflation in food prices, but still seeing stock outs of random items. Supply chain conflicts somewhere.

Anonymous ID:GRUbS0nv Mon 29 Jun 2020 18:53:36 No.265552722
View Report
>>265527417
Short term aberrations do not change fundamentals. Listened to my companies CEO report second quarter earnings. The order rate did not decline week to week from Q2 2019. We can't deliver because of supply chain issues but orders are there and not cancelled.

Anonymous ID:YM8KI9jm Fri 26 Jun 2020 11:23:01 No.264996182
View Report
>>264994799
I think the first thing to happen would be global famine. Our food supply chain is becoming more delicate year by year. The thing is, this collapse will happen anyway even if humans manage to "patch" up any issues that arise. Better for it to happen ASAP. If no collapse happens, then humanity is as a good as extinct.

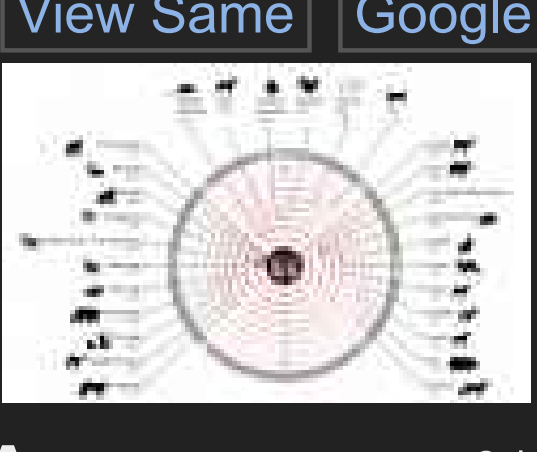
/TKG/ is up >>264993970

View Same Google iqdb SauceNAO Trace 4C305912-BD59-4E4C-910B-12F423D9 (...).jpg, 118KiB, 773x1000

Anonymous ID:uAMA3Y4W Fri 26 Jun 2020 02:03:24 No.264936268
View Report
>>264935280
I'd guess Boeing. They had major cash flow issues with 737 before the hit from covid. Next 2-3 years will be bleak with the number of aircraft stored / parked. They notified suppliers a few weeks ago. The ripple will be a tidal wave if they default on payments to their supply chain.

Anonymous ID:AwbG44xP Thu 25 Jun 2020 17:31:00 No.264881666
View Report
>>264881477
it's not that america will run out of food supply (well some types may be limited due to supply chain issues but no famine), but that all the food will be POZZED in the coming months

View Same Google iqdb SauceNAO Trace meat.png, 361KiB, 979x631



Anonymous ID:3jd50WKF Thu 25 Jun 2020 15:53:49 No.264867159
View Report
>1 million pigs to be euthanized in US due to ((((supply chain issues))))
https://www.businessinsider.com/why-1-million-pigs-euthanized-covid-19-supply-chain-issues-2020-6

>they're still not admitting that meat is pozzed
REMINDER
>Meat is processed, transported, and sold under refrigerated conditions. Viruses are likely to survive in cold temperatures, ready to infect once unpackaged
Sources: http://archive.is/l0YvM
http://archive.is/guWnX

https://pastebin.com/raw/uVaJ7EhQ

Anonymous ID:+X5EDCdj Mon 22 Jun 2020 13:14:05 No.264333012
View Report
>>264309431
>Go to any store that stocks essentials (food, toiletries, paper products) and you'll see clear supply chain issues that aren't being reported on.

Hasn't been the case for weeks.

Anonymous ID:6h0yq9CT Mon 22 Jun 2020 12:43:07 No.264327866
View Report
>>264309431
>Go to any store that stocks essentials (food, toiletries, paper products) and you'll see clear supply chain issues
Store shelves have been fully stocked in my town for along time now.

Anonymous ID:nEPhOv8I Mon 22 Jun 2020 12:26:27 No.264325443
View Report
>>264309431
>Go to any store that stocks essentials (food, toiletries, paper products) and you'll see clear supply chain issues

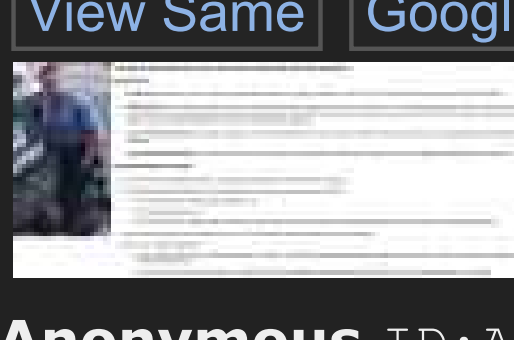
I live in the burbs, supplies are full.

Anonymous ID:yuVsaLyQ Mon 22 Jun 2020 12:24:11 No.264325123
View Report
>>264309431
I work for a consumer goods company and we are seeing almost no supply chain issues

Anonymous ID:9XCLMJmS Mon 22 Jun 2020 12:05:21 No.264322381
View Report
>>264309431
>and you'll see clear supply chain issues that aren't being reported on.
well this is where you are wrong. if you are not making this up, then it's a local issue that doesn't seem to be affecting the rest of the US.

Anonymous ID:HbS31Q3G Mon 22 Jun 2020 11:35:20 No.264317977
View Report
>>264316582
>no supply chain issues
they jacked the price of everything up, now less people are buying.

View Same Google iqdb SauceNAO Trace MPD_Policy.png, 451KiB, 1662x688



Anonymous ID:AHfVP5sF Mon 22 Jun 2020 11:25:52 No.264316664
View Report
>>264309431
>Go to any store that stocks essentials (food, toiletries, paper products) and you'll see clear supply chain issues that aren't being reported on.

Maybe in city, but my rural store has everything in stock.
Just made a trip yesterday. We no longer stocking up, if you will, just replenishing what we used up. We do have a stockpile of goods though:TP,dried meats, beer, water, rice and beans, adn a freezer full of frozen meats. I think the cities are having supply issues because of the riots.

Anonymous ID:WuXdqK/Q Mon 22 Jun 2020 11:25:20 No.264316582
View Report
Quoted By: >>264317977
>>264309431

Fake news, no supply chain issues since the everyone got enough tp to last the rest of the year.

Anonymous ID:IjpCX7wl Mon 22 Jun 2020 11:17:39 No.264315531
View Report
>>264313560

1

> This is insane, never before has the market so openly defied reality

Potentially true, investors may be kidding themselves on some stocks.

> Go to any store that stocks essentials (food, toiletries, paper products) and you'll see clear supply chain issues that aren't being reported on.

What have you based this on, exactly? One stoe you went to? People don't eat or shit or bathe more or less depending on if they're in lockdown. Fundamental demand hasn't changed and has been met (nobody has starved) so surely sales figures for basics would be relatively unchanged?

> If earnings reports (coming out in t minus 3 weeks) don't correct the market

Again, I agree. Overzealous investors may have to eat-shit once actuals come out. But not all earnings reports come out at the same time (different year-ends). Some have already come out and this hasn't shown any grossly overpriced stocks.

> the elites don't need us to make money anymore

What does this even mean?

> We are working in a transcendental economy, one that no longer needs resources

What does this mean? People buy what they want and need. Be that food, phones, cars, houses, or access to the internet, or software. Resources can be physical but they are sometmies not (IP, Human Capital, Software). The basket of goods produced in the economy may be less phsycal-resource based but why is that a bad thing?

> It operates entirety off the principle that every major company is "too big to fail"

I somewhat agree. Government should fuck-off and leave the market alone (i.e. let shit businesses fail and good ones success). This also goes to the 'lockdown' situations. The Government should have warned people about the virus but forcing companies to shut down operations then subsidising them is an economic disaster.

← Previous 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 Next →